QUESTION 53

Have any PG&E energy efficiency programs (not just the WE&T programs) established the minimum knowledge, skills and abilities (KSAs) necessary to ensure quality installation for any specific energy efficiency measures or energy efficiency occupations? If yes, please identify the programs and measures and the identified KSAs. Please provide copies of any studies or reports upon which the KSAs are based.

ANSWER 53

No, PG&E has not defined minimum knowledge, skills and abilities (KSAs) for its various energy efficiency programs. However, as discussed in PG&E's response to Question 26, the General Conditions for Customer Energy Services contracts requires contractors to employ personnel qualified to perform the work (at Section 2.5.2) and requires contractors to comply with all applicable federal, state, and local laws, rules, and regulations, and to obtain all applicable licenses and permits for the conduct of its business and the performance of work under each contract (at Section 10.2.) Some of these laws may relate to the training and skills of workers employed by PG&E's contractors. Additionally, some programs do have minimum licensing or years in business requirements for contractors. These can be found in the individual program manuals, which are publicly available on the California Energy Data and Reporting System (CEDARS) website.
